HAY YIELDS

Didsbury area hay crops will be down significantly Crops may be down 40 to 50 per cent.

by Richard Westlund

Hay crops will not yield their normal numbers in the Didsbury area because of a lack of rain this year says a Forage Specialist.

Gordon Hutton, who works for Alberta Agriculture out of an Olds office, said while farmers in the area will get their crops off the field this year, they are going to come away with significantly less than they usually would.

"Farmers are going to get 50 to 60 per cent of their average. They are going to be down. It was the dry spring that set them back the most," said Hutton, adding that perennial crops like hay are usually the ones that need the consistent moisture during their growing cycle.

Not only are yields going to be down, Hutton said most hay crops will not see a second cut this year because little rain was seen during the end of June and the first few weeks of July.

"Unless people are irrigating their fields there won't be very many second cuts in the province."

The poor hay crops will not only hit the people who are selling their product but also the people that buy hay to feed through the winter.

"It affects a number of things," said Hutton. "First it affects the bottom line. And secondly it is going to affect livestock. They won't have an adequate amount of feed. Not just in Alberta but in Western Canada."

"Feed prices generally go up when there is a shortage."

Rain now will help make the best of what farmers have on their field now, but Hutton said it is too late in the season for the rain to significantly impact total yields.

"What's there is there. Some more rain may help finish off the crop, but there are no miracles left now."

But if it does rain it will help fall pasture conditions, and with expensive hay prices being likely, Hutton believes most farmers will be trying to get the most out of their pasture for as long as they can.

Mid summer moisture is good for fall grazing, he adds.

But if there is a silver lining to this dark cloud for farmers, it is this. According to Hutton, crops that are harvested after growing in harsh conditions tend to be better in terms of nutritional content for animals.

"People tend to underestimate the feed quality after a poor season, but what periodically happens is you end up with high energy feed that is easy for the animals to digest."

Hutton said he encourages farmers to have their product checked for quality.

TOWN COUNCIL Council recinds Development Incentives policy

by Richard Westlund

Didsbury Town Council recinded their Development Incentives policy retroactive to January 1 at last week's Council meeting.

In order to be able to negotiate with businesses on a case by case basis, Council voted unanimously to remove the policy that was put in place in July 1995.

"We were almost restricted by the policy," said Planning and Development Officer Robert Wigg, adding that looking at giving incentives on a case by case basis would be more appropriate for the Town and the applicant.

"We were almost restricted by the policy."

- Robert Wigg,
Planning and Development Officer

The Incentive Policy included the Town being able to give a grant to reduce property taxes by $1,000 in any year for a show home and that Council may provide for the payment of the cost to install water and sewer lines from the nearest roadway or utility easement to a new building on a commercial or industrial property.

Councillors said they were not against the policy of providing incentives, just that the policy was outdated and that a case-by-case basis was the way to go.

COUNTY BUILDING Town has no immediate plans to share building

by Richard Westlund

The Town of Didsbury will talk about sharing a multi-million dollar with the Mountain View County but as of this moment no steps have been taken by the Town.

"At this time we are not willing to share," said Mayor Ray Lea when questioned about it after last week's Town Council meeting.

Town Council and County Council have hired a facilitator to guide talks about shared services between the two municipalities. In those talks the sharing of a building will be discussed between the two local governments.

During the next six to eight months the two sides will meet. The entire councils will meet once a month while the two subcommittees, which will be doing all of the detail work will meet on a more regular basis.

County Council gave the new building the go-ahead at their June Council meeting in a 4-3 vote. According to the agenda of that meeting one of the future decisions to be made was to enter into discussions with the Town about a potential partnership which includes sharing a new building.

IN THE COURTS

Disqualified Carstairs driver hits train and is jailed

A 43-year-old man who ran into the side of a freight train near Carstairs has been jailed.

Randal Rich MacIntosh pleaded guilty in Didsbury provincial court on Monday to charges of driving while disqualified and driving with a blood alcohol level greater than 80 mg per cent.

The accused was the lone occupant of a truck that hit the moving train at a controlled crossing near Carstairs on Dec. 23, 2000, court heard.

The accused, who was not injured in the crash, had previously lost his license following a Jan. 2000 impaired driving conviction.

In an unrelated incident on June 23, 2001 the accused was found to be operating a motor vehicle that had become stuck in a ditch on Hwy 2A near Carstairs.

His blood alcohol level at the time was 190 mg per cent, or more than two times the legal limit.

Judge S. L. Van de Veen accepted a joint submission from Crown and defence for a global sentence of 30 days in jail and a two year driving prohibition.

Woman assaulted ex-boyfriend

A 20-year-old woman who struck her ex-boyfriend during an incident in Sundre in April has been fined.

Lisa Nicole Nylund pleaded guilty to assault and mischief in Didsbury provincial court on July 16.

RCMP received a complaint on April 29 that a car parked outside a Sundre bar had been vandalized, Crown prosecutor Russ Savage told Judge S. Van de Veen.

The accused admitted keying the vehicle and assaulting the victim.

The judge fined Nylund $300, ordered her to pay $75 restitution, and placed her on probation for one year.

Man threatened roommate
A 28-year-old man who threatened his roommate during a phone call in February has been fined.

Robert Douglas Morton pleaded guilty to a charge of uttering a threat to cause bodily harm.

Morton phoned the male victim on Feb. 18 and threatened him after the victim left the accused at a Sundre bar, prosecutor Russ Savage told the court.

Defence council John Boulton said the accused was upset after the victim failed to pay rent on the farmhouse they shared.

The Crown withdrew a charge of careless use/storage of a firearm.

Judge Van de Veen fined Morton $300.

Olds drunk driver fined

A 22-year-old Olds woman who was stopped by police after she ran a stop sign has been convicted of drunk driving.

Heather Grace Saubak pleaded guilty on July 16 to a charge of driving with a blood alcohol level greater than 80 mg per cent.

The accused blood alcohol level was 150 mg per cent when she was stopped early on the morning of June 22, court heard. It was her first criminal conviction.

Judge Van de Veen fined Saubak $600 and prohibited her from driving for one year.

Youth broke into two homes

A 16-year-old Cochrane boy who broke into his ex-girlfriend's trailer and another home earlier this month has been placed on probation.

The youth, who cannot be named, pleaded guilty to two charges of break and enter. He broke windows to gain entrance to the residences, court heard.

He spent three days in custody before Monday's court appearance. Judge Van de Veen placed the boy on probation for one year.

Alberta receives 400,000 lightning strikes a year.

SEVERE WEATHER

Summer weather can turn ugly quickly

Funnel clouds, lightning and hail have all hit local area this summer.

by Richard Westlund

Residents of Didsbury and area should not be surprised to see severe weather during the summer months.

Dan Kulak, Warning Preparedness Meteorologist for Environment Canada, said last week the town of about 4,000 sits in thunderstorm and hail alley.

"It is definitely a thunder storm area," said Kulak from his Edmonton office. "Storms typically start cooking up in the foothills near the mountains west of Olds and then blow through the area between Red Deer and Calgary."

So far this year the Didsbury area has felt victim to not only thunder storms but hail and high winds and a funnel cloud was spotted in the Olds area last week.

Storms can creep on the area in a hurry and Kulak said it is important that people know what to do in certain situations.

"First of all people shouldn't be surprised when they run into severe weather. Listen to the forecast and keep yourself informed."

Tornadoes hit Alberta every year and because of the Pine Lake disaster from last year people have been watching and reporting weather on a more constant basis, said Kulak, adding that Alberta gets on average 16 confirmed tornadoes a year.

"If you see a tornado and worst case scenario you have no where to go, seek shelter and if there is none available you should lie flat on the ground."

"Most funnel clouds do not ever touch the ground however. Less than half ever do. Figure out which way the tornado is moving then move perpendicular to it," he said adding that people should never move directly away from a tornado.

Kulak said during a tornado, when

"Storms typically start cooking up in the foothills near the mountains west of Olds and then blow through the area between Red Deer and Calgary."

- Dan Kulak,
Warning Preparedness
Meteorologist

you are inside a building, with a foundation, you should try to put as many walls between you and the storm as possible. In higher buildings, Kulak said it is safer near the ground but said staying in the middle is the best chance of riding out the storm. He adds that a vehicle is not necessarily a good place to seek shelter.

Earlier this summer, an Alberta woman was struck by lightning and Kulak said this is another type of storm that people should watch out for. He said that if you see lightning and hear thunder less than 30 seconds afterwards, it is probably best to get inside.

The speed of sound is approximately three kilometres per second which means anything less than thirty seconds means the storm is less than 10 kilometres away.

Kulak said people should stay in their houses 30 minutes after they hear the last sound of thunder.

"We call it the 30-30 rule," said Kulak. Alberta receives 400,000 lightning strikes a year.

Summer storms should be expected and people should know what to do when they happen.

Tornadoes are rare, but deadly when they strike

The typical tornado first appears as a rotation in a huge thunder cloud, behind a shroud of heavy rain or hail. The sky turns green or yellow or black at night. Then it descends, a violently twisting funnel cloud. It rumbles like a jet, louder and louder, until the sound is deafening. Snaking erratically from southwest to northeast, the twister topples buildings, scatters debris and tosses cars as though they were toys. Gone minutes later, the tornado leaves a wake of destruction.

In Canada, during an average year, 80 tornadoes cause two deaths and 20 injuries, plus tens of millions of dollars in property damage. These are the reported numbers - who knows how many more tornadoes strike unpopulated areas undetected.

The averages are also deceiving because the majority of twisters do little more than bend TV antennae, break windows, uproot trees, or damage weak structures such as barns and sheds. With wind speeds of less than 160 km/h, and a path 100 m wide by 2 km long, these small tornadoes cause less than three percent of all deaths.

The worst tornadoes are the most violent storms on earth. With winds approaching 500 km/h, they can level even the most solid structures. The path of destruction can reach 42 km long and 390 m wide. Fortunately, Canada has never seen such a storm.

Incidentally, the odds of dying from a tornado are 12 million to one.

Just as the Richter scale measures the intensity of earthquakes, the Fujita scale measures tornado strength.

F0 is the least intense; F5 the most intense. The scale is named for Dr. T. Fujita, a pioneer in tornado research at the University of Chicago. The tornado typically moves over the ground at speeds between 20 and 90 km/h. The path is usually southwest to northeast, although it can be erratic and may change direction suddenly. If you see a tornado and it does not appear to be moving, it is either moving straight away or straight toward you.

Canada's "tornado alleys" are southern Ontario, Alberta, southeastern Quebec, and a band stretching from southern Saskatchewan and Manitoba through to Thunder Bay. The interior of British Columbia and western New Brunswick are also tornado zones. May to September are the prime tornado months, with the peak season in June and early July. The afternoon and early evening are the peak times. Twisters are rare in winter.

Tornadoes' precursors are warm humid weather and thunderstorms that develop when cool northern air masses collide with hot air flowing north from the Gulf of Mexico. Throw in a complicated pattern of updrafts and downdrafts in the atmosphere, and part of the base of the thunder cloud starts to rotate. A tornado is born.

While most tornadoes look like a violently twisting funnel cloud, some may look more like a large, low-lying cloud, a large rain shaft or even smoke from a fire. The shape can change before your eyes.

Exceptionally large thunderstorms can spawn multiple tornadoes, or a single tornado made up of a number of smaller but intense vortices rotating about a common centre.

Experts aren't sure why the centre of one thunder cloud will spin and another one won't. To better understand the dynamics, researchers at Environment Canada are studying images of actual tornado clouds from radar, satellites and photographs. This research will lead to more accurate forecasts and more timely warnings.

Dogged Day of Summer

Richard WESTLUND

Stockwell Day announced there will be a leadership race for the Canadian Alliance and it will happen sooner than later.

In the past couple months Day has been increasingly criticised and has had to deal with rebel MP after rebel MP, who openly called for Day to resign.

It has been less than a year since Day won the leadership of the party by beating out Preston Manning and others on the eve of the Federal election. The Alliance didn't do as well as they hoped in the election but won enough seats to be the official opposition of the house. People in western Canada cast their vote for their local MPs, for the Canadian Alliance and for Stockwell Day.

And now because of 13 dissidents, who made the conscious decision to air the laundry in public, for whatever reasons, democracy has taken a blow. A new leader will be decided when the members of the party vote for one - ignoring all the other ballots of those who gave Day and their local MPs a mandate of four years.

The dissidents ran under party colours, they ran under the conscious decision that Stockwell Day was the leader. And the votes the people gave them were also under that assumption. A leadership review was going to be held regardless next April, and yet the dissidents were not prepared to wait and didn't give him a fair shake.

Whether or not Day stays is not the issue.

The aspirations of a party far outweigh the aspirations of one man. But now a vote for four years is not that. Most people who cast their ballot in the last federal election for the Alliance are probably wondering what their vote counted for - as they are the ones who have watched this party self-destruct.

Recently a few dissidents have made rumblings about wanting back into the party, but Alliance officials have said they won't be allowed back in without an apology.

An apology is in order and if any of the dissidents chose to make one, they shouldn't address it to party officials. It should be sent to the people that voted them in, the people who voted under the assumption they would hold up the principles and leadership they campaigned under.

Day is not the loser in this soap-opera. Democracy is.

Wonderings of the heart

"A New Move"

by Margart Fradley

In June we attended the graduation of our granddaughter from a Christian School. As this particular school only goes up to grade nine, it requires the students to move out and attend a High School in the public school system.

This could perhaps be a real challenge, it might not be an easy transition; in a sense the students are coming out of a warm, somewhat protective environment into a totally new situation. Things will be different.

However, the analogy that came to my mind was, that we bring our young plants and flowers from their protective environment in a green house or warm window ledge and plant them outdoors. They begin to experience cold winds, torrential rain, sometimes even a smothering of snow or hail. Gradually, they send their roots deep into the soil, then take hold, and day by day they become stronger, begin to stand tall and bloom.

The students at the Christian School have experienced a good strong foundation, now they too will be strengthened, they will begin to find their individual niches and bloom.

The END of ANOTHER PERFECT VACATION ...

Political games hurting taxpayers

Amidst this summer's political games in all federal parties, taxpayers are taken for granted. No one is engaging in a substantive policy discussion. The parties must offer up concrete policies that address the economy, governance, and social issues.

The Economy: First, the tax mix should move from reliance on income taxes (personal and corporate) toward consumption taxes. This effort should be coupled with expenditure reductions through privatization, the sale of Crown assets, constitutional limits on spending, and an aggressive legislated debt reduction schedule.

Second, articulation of a two-track trade policy is essential. Trade subsidies should not be seen as a source of competitive advantage, no matter how specific or short-term we are told they will be. Instead, a more aggressive stance is needed in future trade negotiations that aim to level the international playing field for all.

A national plan to reduce interprovincial trade barriers is also needed. The 1994 Agreement on Internal Trade (AIT) is not working. Labour mobility is still restricted for many professions, and political will to adhere to the AIT timetable is non-existent. For Ottawa to ignore this problem while embracing international agreements and promoting multilateral trading frameworks is sheer hypocrisy.

Third, Ottawa must facilitate - not lead - constitutional discussions to ultimately change the relationship between the three orders of government to cede more power to the provinces and cities.

Governance: Taxpayers are demanding concrete performance results as the best measure of the value for their tax dollars. Tangible measures that focus on outputs, not inputs, must become the benchmark for evaluating government program effectiveness.

Parliament needs free votes, and committees actually empowered to improve legislation. Outside Parliament, voting reform and reflective democracy measures must form the bedrock of any governance reform initiative. Our first-past-the-post voting system is obsolete and ill suited for a post-industrial democracy such as Canada. A national referendum on ditching this system with a follow-up vote to adopt a more proportional system is long overdue.

Social Issues: Cross-generational fairness in health-care reform, public pensions and aboriginal policy must be tackled.

The current principles of the Canada Health Act: universality, accessibility, comprehensiveness and portability, can all be rolled into universality as public opinion polls clearly show that Canadians believe them to be one in the same.

Public administration should give way to public governance and new principles of choice, accountability, quality and sustainability should be added.

As for the future, government actuaries tell us the CPP is stable. However, reports indicate that between 66%-75% of Canadians disagree. Today, CPP premiums stand at 7.8%; pegged to hit 9.9% by 2003.

Back in 1966 - when the CPP was instituted - premiums were pegged to never rise above 5.25%. Indeed, we were told they would only reach 5.1% in the year 2025. It's time to let Canadians invest this money for themselves in their own retirement vehicles.

Almost two-thirds of our native population is under the age of 35: their baby boom is happening now implementing a series of reforms in concert with aboriginal leaders including individual property rights, transparent and accountable band governance, and abolition of the Indian Act would all be steps in the right direction. Politics in Canada should be about policy. Sadly, today it is not.

Federal Director

NOTES FROM NIGERIA

Dignitary road closures annoy general populous

Dear Family and Friends,

I traveled with a returned missionary for the last two weeks and had a good time. Originally I was not looking forward at all to being away from home for a longer time, but Harvey is a great guy to be with and we had some very encouraging experiences. I hired a driver to go on this trip because it would be safer and less tiring. However, it didn't always work out that way. We were to leave Jos about 8 a.m. but were delayed because the police shut down the main road for some visiting dignitary. This is standard operating procedure, but quite annoying to the general population. We reached Abuja, purchased an airline ticket for a Nigerian lady who is traveling to Canada to visit another former missionary, and then delivered a letter to the Ministry of Communications. We still had time for lunch and buying petrol before we headed out to meet the plane that Harvey was coming on. There was some 'important' person on the plane with Harvey so there were about 50 policemen at the airport. The airport is fairly new and the air conditioning works okay. Harvey came in and had no trouble getting through the formalities, thank God. We went back to the guesthouse and went out to buy sandwich makings before turning in for the night. Harvey is 67 but has lots of energy and a terrific sense of humor. The next day we drove about eight hours over some interesting roads to get to the Bible College where Harvey and his wife, Rene, had taught for several years. The Fullers, who work there now, had things ready for us and we settled in for a few days. We looked over the College noting changes and chatting with some of the students. Graduation was only a day away. The next day we went to Zuru where I had taught for three and a half years. The paved road had deteriorated seriously, almost like no maintenance had been done in the 17 years since I left. Unfortunately, that may be true. We drove out to visit a family working on a language project. The last four kilometers were over a dirt path that was a bit challenging. Our visit was pleasant—they have a nice house and two well-behaved boys who are home schooled.

Sincerely,
Dan

Bank of Canada should stay out of Dallas, Texas business

Dear Editor,

Since World War II, Canada Savings Bonds, administered by the Bank of Canada, have been a safe and flexible investment, as well as a symbol of national sovereignty for Canadians.

I was dismayed to learn from a press release issued by the Bank of Canada on June 27, 2001, that it has awarded a 9.5 year contract, beginning September 1, 2001, valued at $400 million, to Electronic Data Systems (EDS) Canada, a wholly owned subsidiary of EDS Corporation based in Dallas, Texas, U.S.A., "for the provision of systems and operations support services" which includes the administration of Canada Savings Bonds.

According to the press release, the move will result in about 500 Bank of Canada employees moving to EDS.

In my view, it is also a subtle move toward privatization of the Bank of Canada and further monetary integration with the United States.

Nero fiddled while Rome burned. While Canadians watch hockey and soaps, play bingo, and patronize casinos, our ideology-driven right-wing governments in Ottawa continue to sell out our national sovereignty.

Yours truly,
William Dascavich

Myron Thompson won't seek Alliance leadership

by Dan Singleton

Only moments after Canadian Alliance leader Stockwell Day announced July 17 that a leadership election would be held in the party, Wild Rose MP and Sundre resident Myron Thompson quashed any suggestion he might seek the top post.

In an interview following an Alliance caucus meeting at the Delta Hotel at the Calgary airport, Thompson said someone else will have to take the leadership helm.

"No, no, no. If I was 45, I might consider it, but I'm 65 so no thanks," said Thompson, the third-term Alliance MP for the central Alberta riding.

Day announced the leadership election will be held sometime between Oct. 19, 2001 and July 17, 2002. The national council, the party's governing body, must set the election date, with Day agreeing to step down 90 days before the vote.

The election announcement was seen as Day's latest attempt to quell MP dissension and to reverse a trend that has seen the party plummet in the polls.

However, two days later, on Thursday, 12 dissident Alliance MPs who had left or been removed from caucus for criticizing Day announced they would form a new group, the Democratic Representative Caucus (DRC).

DRC spokesman and MP

Chuck Strahl said Day's refusal to unconditionally step down as Alliance leader and the caucus' insistence the dissidents apologize prompted the move.

"When your leadership crisis draws to a conclusion, perhaps we can resume our partnership," Strahl told reporters in Ottawa. The DRC must receive approval of the House before becoming an official caucus.

The rebels' move further divides an already fractured party and promoted Thompson to call on the rebels to resign their seats in Parliament.

"Sure it's a new party," said Thompson.

"I'm so disgusted with the whole lot. I wish they had the guts to resign their position as MPs and run.

"They have a lot to learn about democracy.

"If they believe in what they are doing is right, they should resign and have a by-election and run on your own ticket. Of course the Liberals are happy."

OLDS COLLEGE 135 expected at 4-H Horse Classic

One of the biggest 4-H horse programs will put the skills of more than 135 equine enthusiasts to the test, with the top four senior members earning a trip to Denver for their efforts.

The Horse Classic program, running August 1 to 3, 2001 at Olds College, teaches new skills to participants while re-enforcing their previous knowledge in a series of lectures, quizzes and demonstrations. Although participants don't spend any time on horse back at the program, they invariably come away with greater knowledge about all areas of horse riding, training and health.

"They learn new skills from the program and from other delegates, and build on their pre-existing skills," said Jen Bishop, program coordinator with the 4-H Branch of Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development. "There are a lot of confidence builders in the program because there is a wide range of members who work together on the different challenges that are posed to them."

Sponsored by SSG Gloves, Gas Alberta Inc., Alberta Motor Association, UFA Lammie's Western Wear, and Burwash Brand Horse Gear, the program involves a number of different sections on which participants are judged. The Horse Bowl tests delegates' knowledge in a Reach For the Top-style quiz game, while the marketing contest and illustrated talks and demonstrations allow them to showcase their skills and knowledge for a group of judges. The most challenging portion of the program is the Hippology Contest, which tests delegates through equine identification stations, judging, visual quizzes and team problems. The top four senior participants in the Hippology Contest will earn a spot on the Alberta 4-H team that will take part in the Denver Round-Up Horse Competition in January.

"Going to Denver is a big deal, not only to members and their families, but also to the Alberta 4-H Branch," said Bishop. "We're proud of all the delegates that compete. They have to earn this trip, and whether they're at the top or the bottom, we're still just as proud."

As well as putting their equine knowledge to the test, there will be opportunities for delegates to socialize and make new friends at both a pizza party on the first night of the program and a dance on the following evening. "We hope that delegates will leave the program with more knowledge, more friends and great 4-H memories," said Bishop.

Focus on the Family

QUESTION: What are the prospects for the very pretty (or handsome) child? Does she (or he) usually have smooth sailing all the way?

DR. DOBSON: Well, that child has some remarkable advantages.

She is much more likely to accept herself and enjoy the benefits of self-confidence. However, she also faces some unique problems that the homely child never experiences.

Beauty in our society is power, and power can be dangerous in immature hands.

A 14-year-old young woman, for example, who is prematurely curved and rounded in all the right places may be pursued vigorously by males who would exploit her beauty.

As she becomes more conscious of her flirtatious power, she is sometimes urged toward promiscuity.

Furthermore, women who have been coveted physically since early childhood often become bitter and disillusioned as they age.

I'm thinking particularly of Hollywood's most glamorous sex queens, such as Marilyn Monroe and Brigitte Bardot, who had difficulty dealing with the depersonalization of body worship as the years passed. Research also indicates some interesting consequences in regard to marital stability for the "beautiful people."

In one important study, the more attractive college girls were found to be less happily married 25 years later. It is apparently difficult to reserve the "power" of sex for one mate, ignoring the ego gratification that awaits outside the marriage bonds.

And finally, the more attractive a person is in his or her youth, the more painful is the aging process. My point is this: The measurement of worth on a scale of beauty is wrong, often damaging to the "haves" and "have-nots" alike.

QUESTION: I know that my husband is a womanizer — a guy who can't resist anything in a skirt. Will he always be like this? Can I change him?

DR. DOBSON: It is difficult, if not impossible, to change anyone. It certainly cannot be accomplished by nagging and complaining and chastising.

That only causes a person to dig in his heels and fight to the finish.

What you can do is make it clear to your husband that he can't have you and a harem too, and that he must make a choice between his lust and his love. Unfortunately, merely putting these alternatives before him verbally will not force him to select one over the other. He would rather have both.

That's why there will probably come a time for loving toughness when you back your words by firmness and definitive action.

QUESTION: I have a friend who is a frequent victim of spousal abuse. How would she go about dealing with her husband's problem?

DR. DOBSON: The principles of "love must be tough" offer the best response to an abusive husband.

They begin with a recognition that behavior does not change when things are going smoothly. If change is to occur, it usually does so in a crisis situation.

Thus, a crisis must be created and managed very carefully.

After the woman moves out and makes it clear that she has no intention of returning, the ball moves to her husband's court.

If he never responds, she never returns. If it takes a year, or five years, then so be it.

He has to want her bad enough to face his problem and to reach out to her.

When (and if) her husband acknowledges that he has an abusive behavior pattern and promises to deal with it, negotiations can begin.

A plan can be agreed upon that involves intensive Christian counseling with a person of the wife's choosing.

She should not return home until the counselor concludes that she will be safe and that the husband is on the way to recovery. Gradually, they put their relationship back together.

It's a long shot, but one worth working to achieve.

Marathon Man

Dan Peters is giving the term "hitting the streets" a whole new meaning. For the past month, the well-known 43-year-old Didsburian has been running 15 - 20 miles per week along local streets and avenues in preparation for the Stampede Road Race he participated in (and completed) on Sunday, July 8th.

Peters completed the grueling 26 mile course in 4:53:47, a personal best considering the intense heat that day. "It was 31 degrees Celsius by 11:00am," says Peters. "...but it was very well run. We had 14 water stations and numerous aid stations along the way. We were very well cared for."

Among the many highlights for Peters was the running mate he met the day of the race that shared his last name and an 87-year-old he had the opportunity to meet who began running when he was 70. "It was truly an honor to have the chance to meet someone who was so dedicated to the sport and to finishing. He was a huge inspiration to me throughout the day."

Although Peters chose to do the full marathon distance of the race, other Didsbury residents joined in on the numerous optional activities planned that day. Marc and Wanda Aubee, Marge Jones and Kathy Peters all took part in the 10 kilometre run...but there was also a relay and even a family run to choose from. "The Marathon was just part of the day's event, there were lots of activities going on all at once."

Peters admits that running a long course event like a Marathon can be difficult, but that the superior organization and foresight of this event made the experience truly enjoyable and entertaining. "There's so much to see along the way. It's never boring," says Peters. "They had an actual wall set up at mile 20 that was really humorous since most people hit the (proverbial) wall around that time, and entertainers stationed at various intervals along the way to cheer you on and divert your attention for a moment or two. It was great to be part of such an event."

When it was over, Peters received a medal and sweatshirt to commemorate his experience. "I would like to do it again and shave off some more time next year," says Peters. "It's such a rush to finish something like this...once you're hooked on the sport, you're hooked."

A Beauty Pageant for Storefronts, Yards and Gardens

Time to roll up your sleeves and get your imagination (and elbow grease) in motion again. This year's Didsbury Fair and Rodeo will once again be offering prizes and cash for the best looking storefronts and yards and gardens in the region.

Judges will be circulating throughout the Didsbury business core Friday, August 17th at 1:00pm looking for the most appealing display abiding by the theme: "International Year of the Volunteer." Along with the honor of being named the best storefront in town, the winners will receive a plaque for their efforts donated by the Alberta Treasury Branch, Medallion Trophy and the Didsbury Ag Society.

Ag Society Director, Bob Davidson, says the specifications and requirements for the Yard Judging Contest are a bit more involved, but every bit worth the effort. "Judging will be based on the overall appeal of the yard - both front and back. Most important will be the look, health and variety of the plants." Davidson says garden "accessories" such as trellises and decorative rock are secondary. Judges will be looking for the absence of weeds and the overall appeal of the yard instead. "There is more work involved to be sure, but your efforts will not go unnoticed. There has never been a case when anyone has been out of the money especially in the rural category. Even in town last year, we had only four entries...and this year we have a second sponsor for rural yards as well, so your chances are even greater," explains Davidson.

Chinook Yard Care, for example, is donating a special prize for 1st in urban yards. Annie Pringle has graciously donated the 2nd and 3rd urban prize draws. On the rural side of things For Trees has donated the 1st prize with Annie Pringle once again donating prizes for 2nd and 3rd rural yard prizes. The fee for entering either the Rural or Urban Yard Judging Contest is $2.00 which includes membership into the Agricultural Society. Deadline for entries is August 8th. "You can pick up an entry form in the front section of the Didsbury Fair and Rodeo booklet available at most stores across town," says Davidson.

Raffle offers Big Rewards at Fair and Rodeo

A trip to this year's Fair and Rodeo in Didsbury could turn out to be more profitable than ever imagined for one lucky patron. As part of their line-up of attractions this year, the Didsbury Agricultural Society will be raffling off tickets to win 20 Bred Heifers or $24,000 Cash!

Ag Society Director and Cattle Committee Member, Don Regner, says the raffle's hefty prize offering is being made possible through the cooperation and generosity of many. "It's really a communal effort," says Regner. "...The 20 heifers are all Charolais Cross and have been exposed to a Red Angus Bull, so it should make for pretty good stock if the winner decides to keep them. The nice thing is that you have the option to just take the cash." Last year's winners of the bred heifers were Joyce and Paul Bayfield. "It's nice to see area residents win," says Regner. All proceeds from the raffle go towards community events sponsored by the Ag Society. "...Through the joint efforts of the Ag Society and other service groups, we have coordinated fundraising for projects such as the Didsbury Agri-Sportsplex Curling Rink Facility and the Mountain View Livestock Complex. These buildings are now used to host the Didsbury Fair and Rodeo, The Farmers' Market, Horse Shows, Curling Bonspiels and numerous 4-H and youth group activities." Anyone interested in entering in this year's raffle can purchase their tickets from either McMann Autobody, Mountain View Motors, Didsbury Meat Processing, Checker Auto Parts, and Krebs Veterinary Services. "You can also obtain tickets by calling the Ag Society Office at 335-4494 or contacting any Didsbury Ag Society Member." Regner says, adding that 1200 tickets are being printed and over 75 percent of them will be sold by the time of the draw. Heifers will be available for viewing during the rodeo weekend. The Draw Date will be midnight Saturday, August 18th at the Rodeo Cabaret being held in the Curling Rink.

Jhyl Loughlin

Jobs for Sale

Few things are worse for a teenager in the summertime than being short on cash. Thankfully, the Centre for Employment in Olds is busy searching for short-term jobs in the Didsbury area specifically designed to help alleviate that very problem.

The program - referred to as SEPP (Student Employment Placement Program) is offered to communities throughout the county in a fashion similar to that of the well-known

Hire-a-Student program. "We basically cover Olds, Didsbury, Bowden and Sundre with the mandate to create jobs for youth in an outreach fashion," says Jhyl Loughlin, Coordinator for the Program. "...one of the biggest differences from the old HAS program is that our service is run out of an office separate from that of the town - in this case the Centre for Employment. It just makes better sense for someone looking for a job or interested in posting a job to visit us first, instead of a municipal office. Our purpose is clearer on the onset."

Loughlin says that once employers in a community have contacted her office, a special job board is then set up as a means of communicating with teens in search of work. In Didsbury that job board is posted at the entrance of the Aquatic Centre. "So far we have had a lot of teens express an interest in obtaining jobs here in town," says Loughlin. "We just need to find some more employers in Didsbury. We have no problem finding people to fill the positions if we had them. We even have kids that are on an on-call list who are able to work at a moments notice."

SEPP and the services involved to both youth and employers is free. More information can be obtained by calling the Centre for Employment in Olds and speaking with Jhyl Loughlin at 556-3808.

CARSTAIRS ARENA

Carstairs will go ahead with arena demolition

by Chris Puglia

The saga of the old Carstairs Memorial Arena has come to an end with council's decision to tear the ageing facility down.

The decision came following a council meeting when Mayor Richard Dais asked if there had been any further input expressed by stakeholders who were interested in utilizing the building.

CAO Elizabeth Smart subsequently informed council that no further contact had been made by the Indoor Soccer Association who were proposing to convert the arena into an indoor soccer facility.

The last contact the Town had from the Indoor Soccer Association was three weeks ago around the same time that council had released a report drafted by Bearden Engineering which indicated that mandatory short term repairs to the building would be in excess of $250,000 and a similar amount for long term repair costs.

The higher than expected cost coupled with the loss of the association's potential investor because the Town was unwilling to sell the building, made renovating the facility unfeasible.

Initially the soccer association thought the repairs could have been done for $50,000.

The $50,000 was also going to be put forward by a local investor who pulled his support because he was not interested in a lease agreement with the Town.

That information has put the Town back to the original plan which was to demolish the facility, and in a proactive step measures were put in place to ensure the costs of demolition could be kept to a minimum.

Originally the Town had set a speedy time line back in the spring to demolish the building fearing the costs would be extreme if the Town had to haul the building's material due to the June closure of the landfill.

However, foreseeing this possibility some space was set aside in the landfill for that purpose.

The exact timeline for the demolition of the building has not been set, currently the Town is determining the exact cost for tearing down the building.

Previously it was believed that the cost would be $25,000, but Smart said those estimates were preliminary.

BUSINESS OF FARMING

Assessing the image and presentation of your enterprise

The importance of a business's visual message sent to customers is well known. The problem starts when it comes to making that visual presentation effective.

"It's not an easy job," says Slav Heller, rural development specialist - business with Alberta Agriculture, Food and Rural Development, St. Paul. "It all begins with the development of a basic image that is consistently expressed through the business' marketing activities. It is advisable to seek the help of a marketing consultant and a graphic designer to start the process. To implement their work, a printer, sign maker, web site designer and an advertising agency may possibly be needed."

It makes sense to start early and on the right foot. If the business is already established it is likely that there have already been different forms of visual presentation developed. This can make it more difficult and costly to get the business on a new visual track. Whatever stage of the business, seeking professional help when developing or revamping the business image is a good step.

"Business image all starts with the name," adds Heller, "Second is a logo, which is a simple graphic image that can be easily associated with the business. Lettering style and dominant colours also contribute to the image along with the general style of the business' visual 'look'."

Once a visual image is developed, it can be incorporated into everything the business does. The business should send a consistent message in its signs, stationery, labels, packages, promotional and advertising materials, web site, business wear and accessories and even vehicles. A business' visual image should speak loudly of its unique and high quality products and its customer oriented way of operating.

"Having a professionally developed business image reinforces a marketing message and it makes all consecutive marketing less expensive," says Heller, "Once you have the main material, you have what you need to build a consistent visual message. An initial investment in artistic work can start to pay back very quickly."

Treat the venture of seeking professional people to help with the development of a business image the same as any other business venture. Shop around. Get estimates and quotes. Ask to see examples of previous work. Supply information about the business and examples of visuals that have been used to date. Look for professionals that are willing to spend the initial time with you to truly understand the business, and the potential market.

GRASSLANDS

Pasture renovation leads to increased productivity

In today's competitive marketplace, farmers need to take advantage of every opportunity to increase productivity and keep ahead of the game. One way to do this is to make sure every patch of land is working for you.

In western Canada, a nasty weed called Canada thistle, which can take up large patches of land, has caught the attention of Edward Bork, assistant professor of range science at the University of Alberta.

In 1999, Bork initiated an extensive research program into Canada thistle management in pastures. As part of the program, he and his research team established eight yield loss assessment plots in central Alberta to evaluate the biologic and economic impacts of thistle on pastures.

At several additional sites, they are evaluating the short and long-term efficacy of various control measures, which include chemical herbicide treatments, mechanical removal (e.g. mowing), as well as the role of fertilization in thistle management. Bork's overall goal is to determine the economic thresholds for various thistle control options, and provide producers with an integral package of information to help achieve long-term control. Dyvel DS is one of the herbicides being used in the research study.

"Most Canada thistle research has been done in annual cropping systems rather than permanent cropland such as pasture," said Bork.

"This limited information means that management of thistle is largely re-active rather than pro-active. Pro-active management requires reliable information on thistle impacts to both forage yields and the effectiveness of various control practices typically available to producers," he said.

Now about half way through his three-year study, Bork's goal is to establish just how much profitability farmers are losing in forage and beef production because of Canada thistle infestations.

"Canada thistle is a tough weed to get control of," says Bork. "It develops a massive root system that eventually generates large patches of weeds, which produces most of the new plants. Surprisingly, relatively few of the new plants actually come from the Canada thistle seed," he said. The study is being conducted in stages - with each stage being integral to and impacting on subsequent components in terms of the final assessment. Other research currently underway includes the application of selective and non-selective herbicides with weed-wiping technology for thistle removal, as well as the role of grazing management practices in achieving thistle control. Collectively, this information will provide growers with different options for dealing with pasture weeds, specifically thistle. Overall economic assessments of the various treatment options are not expected until the end of the three-year study.

Leighton Blashko, a technical development specialist for BASF says, "you need a safe and effective herbicide to knock down Canada thistle - it's a serious yield inhibitor that requires a weed control program that is effective."

Research with Dyvel DS on pasture is showing good results & it is performing well on Canada thistle. Depending on the severity of the weed infestation, results have shown that a second application of Dyvel DS may be necessary. For example, if you have a patch of thistles with 50 or 60 plants per square metre, one application of Dyvel DS may reduce the stand by about 80 per cent, but you'll want to reapply to further reduce their population. Another advantage to using Dyvel DS is that there are no grazing restrictions for beef cattle after application."

Dyvel DS has a proven chemistry that provides economical, superior control of 33 of the toughest broadleaf weeds including Canada thistle and sow thistle.

SUMMER TREE TIP

Benefits of Mulch:

Mulch has many advantages for growing healthy trees.

- Mulch inhibits weed's growth.
- Mulch protects the trunk of the tree from lawn mower & weed trimmer damage.
- Mulch holds in moisture. Did you know trees need the equivalent of 1" of rain every 7 to 10 days. The majority of water absorbing roots are in the top 6" of soil. Shallow watering does not properly meet the needs of trees & excess water at the tree trunk encourages growth of fungi that can kill trees. Putting down mulch will help the moisture from evaporating at a quick rate, during hot & dry weather & during Chinook & winter winds.

- It is recommended to install 2-3" of mulch up to the tree's drip line, or at least a 3 foot diameter circle around the trunk of the tree. Ensure that the mulch does not touch the trunk of the tree!

Some trees make their own mulch. When doing yard work clean up leave needles & comes under evergreen trees. It is best to use organic material such as bark mulch or wood chips, rather than gravel.

FOR TREES COMPANY will supply & install SUNPINE Bark Mulch

ALBERTA CROP CONDITIONS

Variable amounts of moisture received in central region

In general, warm, dry conditions blanketed the province advancing crops in the Peace Region and punishing the crops the farther south you go. On average, only three tenths of an inch of rain fell in the province and crop conditions continue to deteriorate.

In the south at Stirling, staff report that it is likely too late for moisture to aid this year's crop which is burning up.

Further west, at Ft. Macleod, staff say crops have matured rapidly due to hot, dry conditions and are only 12 to 16 inches tall and heading out.

In the Vulcan area, fall and spring crops are rated as below average and are showing signs of stress due to a lack of moisture.

At the Equity grain facility, staff report that hot dry conditions are beginning to affect crops and moisture is required to preserve current conditions.

In the central region, amounts of moisture received were highly variable.

In the Westlock area, no moisture was reported while Stettler and Lacombe areas reported over an inch.

To the east of Edmonton, six tenths of an inch of rain covered this area while only four tenths of an inch made its way to the Provost area.

The crop condition index is registering average and additional moisture will be key to maintaining this rating.

Warm dry conditions covered much of the Peace region allowing crops to put the available moisture to good use.

Spotty showers brought only two tenths of an inch of rain and moisture conditions continue to be rated as very good.

Crop conditions are currently between average to good.

Agricore staff at Falher/

Smoky River say they're still seeing insect infestations in canola and spraying continues for these pests. A general rain in the Falher area would also be welcome to help keep the prospects improving for a good crop.

Camp achievement ...

Pilots Athletic Camps offers residence sports camps for volleyball and basketball throughout the summer at Prairie Bible Institute in Three Hills. Matthew Steckly spent four days at the Junior Boys basketball camp, learning technical skills on the court and life skills off the court. Along with 30 other junior boys from across Alberta, he worked and played hard and found the week to be a valuable learning experience. Matthew earned the "Best Team Player" award for the week and his team won the silver medal in the camp round-robin playoffs. In addition to rewarding achievement on the court, the camp stresses and rewards faithfulness for hard work and encouragement of teammates. During the week Matthew received a faithfulness award and was the top-encourager of the day.

MEN'S GOLF

Area golfers qualify for Alberta Clarica Amateur

by Barry Williams

Five area golfers have qualified for the Alberta Clarica Amateur Open, emblematic of men's golf supremacy within the province.

Ryan Plitz, of the Innisfail Golf and Country Club, fired a one under 71 at the Olds Central Highlands Golf Course at the Alberta Amateur Qualifying tournament held in Olds on Monday July 16, 2001. Plitz was two strokes behind the eventual winner Tom Alford, who carded a 69. Alford, of the Red Deer Golf and Country Club, will lead a contingent of 27 golfers from the central Alberta area into the Clarica Alberta Open scheduled for the Ironhead golf and Country Club on July 25-26, 2001.

Tim Reeve, a member of the Olds Golf Club Association, carded a 73 to qualify by one stroke, while Doug Manning, of the Olds Golf Association, putted out with a 74 and had to head into an extra hole to qualify for the men's provincial tournament.

Fresh off his fifth place finish at the Alberta Golf Association's Junior Men's provincial championships held in Barhead last week, Sundre's Ryan Swelin made the final cut with a 73 while Kreg MacPhee, of Innisfail, also carded a 73 to qualify for his first Clarica Amateur Open tournament. MacPhee also participated in the Junior Men's provincial championships.

A total of 115 golfers participated in the Alberta Amateur Qualifying tournament. All golfers teeing off in the Olds tournament held a handicap ranging from 9 down to -0.2.

According to Olds Central Highlands Golf club manager, Brent Hutcheon, the tournament was very competitive as seven golfers headed into the extra hole play-off to declare the final position for the qualifying round for the Alberta Clarica Amateur Open.

"A total of 28 golfers fired 74 or better in the tournament," said Hutcheon, noting the competition was fairly even throughout the tournament.

Three other players from Olds, Mark Schultz, Robert Weseen and Marcel Hochstein along with Innisfail's Trevor Meding, Ron Harder and Lyle Svitch played the qualifying round but failed to advance further.

Golfers from Calgary north to Edmonton took part in the tournament.

FUNDRAISING

ASC golf tournament was a money-making success

Heads up - It's Time for a HUGE Thank You! The 6th Annual Fundraising Golf Tournament for ASC was a great success due to the support received from everyone who either came out to golf or pledged one of the golfers. This year, a total of 60 golfers enjoyed a great day of golf at the Didsbury course while clearing more than $5,400 dollars for special projects at the agency. A special thank you must also be sent to all the businesses who either donated a prize or pledged the agency golf team.

We have a valuable pool of volunteers who are always looking for ways to give back to their community and we are active in several volunteer sites. Out charity golf tournament is held the third Saturday of each June and the Dids-

When Tomorrow Starts Without Me

By David M. Romano

When tomorrow starts without me, and I'm not there to see:
If the sun should rise and find your eyes, all filled with tears for me;
I wish so much you wouldn't cry, the way you did today, while thinking of the many things, we didn't get to say.
I know how much you love me, as much as I love you, and each time you think of me, I'll miss me too;
But when tomorrow starts without me, please try to understand, that an angel came and called my name, and took me by the hand,
and said my place was ready in heaven far above, and that I'd have to leave behind all those I dearly love.
But as I turned to walk away a tear fell from my eye, for all life I'd always thought I didn't want to die.
I had so much to live for, so much yet to do, it seemed almost impossible, that I was leaving you.
I thought of all the yesterdays, the good ones and the bad,
I thought of all the love we shared, and all the fun we had.
If I could relive yesterday just even for awhile,
I'd say goodbye and kiss you and maybe see you smile.
But then I fully realized that this could never be,
for emptiness and memories, would take the place of me.
And when I thought of worldly things I might miss come tomorrow
I thought of you, and when I did, my heart was filled with sorrow.
But when I walked through heaven's gates, I felt so much at home when God looked down and smiled at me, from His great golden throne.
He said, "This is eternity, and all that he promised you
Today for life on earth is past, but here it starts anew.
I promise no tomorrow, but today will always last,
and since each day's the same day, there's no longing for the past.
But you have been so faithful, so trusting and so true,
Though there were times you did some things, you knew you shouldn't do.
But you have been so forgiving and now at last your free.
So when tomorrow starts without me,
don't think we're far apart,
for every time you think of me,
I'm right here, in your heart.
